Experience

Macarena develops her activities in the Labor Department.

She is a Doctor in Law and Social Sciences, graduated from the University of the Republic and has a postgraduate degree in Labor Law from the University of Montevideo.

She specializes in Labor Law, both in corporate and litigation areas, with experience in administrative labor law and social security.

She regularly assists and represents national and multinational companies in individual and collective disputes both in court and before the Ministry of Labor and Social Security.

Her assistance includes providing comprehensive advice on labor relations, focusing in conflict prevention. In particular, through the evacuation of regulatory consultations (general and special benefits by sector of activity), drafting of internal regulations, protocols, labor contracts, novations agreements and legal reports.

She has experience assisting in the implementation of internal policies on labor harassment, remote work, control of outsourced services, among others.

She also leads internal investigations and due diligence processes, and provides assistance in labor administrative matters, in files generated before Labor Authorities related to compliance with labor regulations and health and safety matters.

During her professional career she has published several articles in Newsletters and legal magazines.

She is a member of the Uruguayan Association of Labor Law and Social Security and the Uruguayan Bar Association.
